“ Midge was my girlfriend when I was at Stanford. Obviously we haven't kept in touch for many years. Now, sadly, I realize I can't ever be in touch. She was a sweet person. I am sad that she is gone but glad that I knew her, even though it was many years ago.

“ This is sad to see. Dr. Tripp was an inspirational doctor that provided me and my family medical care nearly 20 years. Today I went online to find her to reach out about my medical records. Sadly, today, I learned that this wonderful human being and her spirit ascended to somewhere greater. Much love to her and her family. - Caroline T.

“ Dr Tripp was my son’s cardiologist. He has Down Syndrome and she always took special care to talk to my son and treated him with a lot of compassion. She shared with me that her brother had Down Syndrome and had died from the associated heart defect and his condition had inspired her to be a cardiologist so she could take care of kids with heart problems. I know it has been three years since her passing but I am so thankful for her loving and gentle care.

“ I looked online for Dr Tripp because my son is about to graduate High School and I wanted to send her a note. I'm so sad I didn't get to see her again after she retired. Dr Tripp looked after my son's heart health from his birth in 2003 till 2011.

I thought she was a wonderful person and cardiologist, I looked forward to seeing her every time and for the years when surgeries & interventions were happening she was my rock. I'm attaching 3 photos from a 2011 check-up when my son was about a week post-op and this was his last appointment with Dr Tripp before she retired.

*My heartfelt condolences to her family.

“ To the Family of Dr. Midge Tripp,

My husband and I want to extend out deepest condolences at the loss of Dr. Tripp.

Please know that my husband and I credit her with saving our premature daughter, Kristen Sandoval's life at the University of California, San Diego neo-natal care unit in February, March and April, 1974. Kristen weighted 2.4 lbs when she underwent PDA heart surgery and Dr. Tripp spent many long hours resuscitating and caring for her. She went as far as to do a direct blood transfusion when we were unable to find donated blood that was compatible with Kristen's blood.

Dr. Tripp will always have a very special place in our heart.

“ I remember Midge better than almost anyone in our class as we rotated in tandem throughout internship as well, and am sad not to have reestablished contact after house staff years. Her memory lives on here as though it was still in the 70's.

“ This is her other daughter Valerie Tripp. She also has another grandchild Kamrun Mitchell Tripp. She was a good mother to me and Brittany. She was a great doctor that saved my biologicals sisters life. She chose me and Brittany to be her daughters. She loved dogs and loved her patients but most and for her job was being a mother. I love you mom and you will be missed by all of those that loved you
