

Ryan Patrick Dylan Conrad

July 25, 1978 - February 23, 2017

Ryan Conrad never met a stranger. His hugs were deep and true. You could see his smile from a block away and you always looked forward to crossing his path. He drank ginger ale and wore handmade shoes. You could count on him to be the healthiest, best-dressed and most magnetic individual in any room. He was a Physical Therapist and a yogi and a cook and a builder and a host and a teacher and a stylist and a dancer and a biker and a surfer.

Ryan Conrad was at the show. Ryan Conrad was backstage.

Between the spaces of those larger-than-life traits are the real-life stories that made up the life of our dear friend, Ryan Conrad. He was born July 25, 1978 in Lancaster Ohio to Dianna Johnson Conrad and Karl Conrad. In his teens he crossed the country traveling with bands and friends. His early college days were spent studying sustainable development at Appalachian State University. This ardor for form and design blossomed into the architecture of physiology, and eventually the architecture of life and loving.

Ryan met so many of his dreams with deep passion, courage, and curiosity. He devoted more than half of his life to yoga—the disciplined side of it, devoting hours each day to his asana practice and sutra studies. He became a certified Iyengar Yoga instructor, and has since worked diligently to help his students find their best selves through a sustained yogic practice.

In 2010, he became a doctor—not the stethoscope-holding kind, but a doctorate of physical therapy from UNC Chapel Hill to expand his knowledge of anatomy, physiology and deepen his abilities to provide assistance to those in need. He merged modern medicine with alignment-based yoga for his patients at Carepartners, who were working to get back on their feet from neurological and musculoskeletal trauma. He put these skills and his love of live music to work through the access program at Bonnaroo, helping those with disabilities to attend the annual music festival in Tennessee.

Ryan was a wild rabbit that could not be tamed ‘til he met the love of his life, R. Brooke Priddy. During their early courtship, he was seen at the New French Bar crooning Patsy Cline’s “Crazy” acapella for Brooke and their best friend, Kelledy.

A little later, 223 miles away from Brooke for his doctorate studies, every morning he woke and faced West and she woke and faced East and they spoke their daily devotional “I honor you and hold you in my heart.” Their love burned stronger and more committed with every year.

They married in 2012 beneath the blue moon and stars amongst their closest friends and family. By the Autumn of 2015 came the birth of their son, Harper Reed.

One of Ryan’s dearest friend’s David said, “I first met him as he was working in the garden behind Brooke’s studio. He was shirtless and long-haired at the time, so it was hard to tell if he was a hippie, a hipster, or something in between. When we began to speak, he emanated kindness and brilliance.”

His finest hours were spent on his yoga mat; in the arms of his beloved Brooke; on a train in India; but mostly with his only son.

Ryan died peacefully in his home surrounded with love. He is survived by his wife Brooke, his son Harper Reed, his parents Dianna Johnson Conrad and Karl Conrad, his grandmother Margaret Henry Johnson and his two dogs, the old hound Seymour and the blind, diabetic rescue dog, Keller.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests memorial contributions:

“ Hello, you do not know me. I read the obituaries every day to honor those we have lost. After I read Ryan' s beautiful tribute, I realized I met this fine man one day, in an elevator. He was actually comforting someone with encouraging words. His words, his demeanor and his soul touched my heart. I knew I was in the presence of someone very very special. What a gift. What a loss to all of us. My deepest condolences to all of you. I hope you find comfort from each other. God Bless.

“ I have had so much love and respect for Ryan since the day I met him. He was so gentle with Brooke bringing her to meet me to try and ease her complete and utter fear of dentistry, and when he brought Harper to meet me the first time with that adorable sweater on that Brooke had made. Our last 2 conversations were so good, so long, and so real, the kind that make you just come away knowing people come in your life for a reason. Much Love My Friend ❤️ ~Jamie Revis
